You have finally worked your way to the innermost sanctum: the Headmaster's Office. The room is large and lush; a smoky haze obscures the vaulted arches and renders the light from the candelabra soft and feeble against the dark stained wood of the bookshelves, pool table and finely carved statuary, not to mention the rich ruby carpet, fine tapestries, mounted animal heads, and thousands of dust-covered books. What attracts your attention, however, is the huge wooden board hanging from the far wall.

It is inscribed "Hall Of Fame", and gold-leaf letters trace a series of what appear to be names, but on closer inspection, are something else entirely. Your intuition tells you that this is important, that what it hides is the very source of this hideous deathtrap academy...
